Hörmann UK introduces new style of sectional garage door

Europe's leading door manufacturer, Hörmann UK, is transforming sectional garage doors with the launch of its new aluminium frame sectional garage door (ART 42).

Building on the durability, longevity and urban aesthetic of Hörmann UK's industrial product offering, the new garage door range offers outstanding service life, security and thermal efficiency, combined with a contemporary visual style.

Featuring an aluminium frame that can be personalised with a range of infill options, professionals can capitalise on potential sales by offering customers the opportunity to create a unique aesthetic, whilst also maximising the available natural light. Customers can select from a range of 11 finishes, from synthetic double pane grey tinted glazing, to perforated stainless steel.

The aluminium frame can be coated in 15 different colours, or can be colour matched to complement existing windows and entrance doors. This again enables professionals to move away from the 'one size fits all' approach of traditional garage doors, providing customers with the flexibility to create a unique exterior to their property.

Also available for side garage doors, the ART 42 features a streamlined design for quick and easy installation that also supports comprehensive and straightforward servicing. For enhanced thermal performance, the ART 42 is available with a thermal break to improve insulation levels, whilst subsequently minimising drafts.

David O'Mara, Marketing Manager for Hörmann UK, said: "Throughout Hörmann's longstanding history, the design, supply and manufacture of garage doors has remained at the very core of the business. It's this continuous research and development and commitment to providing the most innovative garage doors that has led to the launch of our new ART 42 sectional range.

"We wanted to provide installers with the ability to offer customers complete design freedom, with the opportunity for the garage door to complement existing entrance doors and windows through 11 different infill designs and 15 different frame colours."
